CHAMBERLAIN REGAINS HIS HEALTH AGAIN

Lauds California Climate—Not Interested in Politics

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Oct. 1.—Sir Austro Chamberlain, British secretary of foreign affairs, had newspaper reporters who met him and his family Sunday aboard the steamer President Adams, mouth of the opinion of the California climate, but not a word on politics.

Not only did he refuse to be interviewed, but he had no interest in the affairs, but he stopped Lady Chamberlain's answers when reporters addressed questions on the same subject to her.

Away From Politics

He explained that his trip which will include a two week visit to California was designed to "get away from politics," of which he had "four years."

When asked a question relating to the limitation, he said he had not been informed of recent developments.

Turning to the interviewers, he said: "I simply will not talk to you about politics. Why do you want to know my opinion when you have your own presidential campaign?"

Lady Chamberlain said the trip had been for Sir Austro's health and had been really successful.

The trip has been just the making of him, she said. The British has left him so completely that he is an entirely different person.

In Frisco Today

Sir Austro and Lady Chamberlain will go from Los Angeles today to San Francisco where they will be the guests of friends. Last night they were dinner guests at the home of Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks.

Four destroyers of the United States navy fleet escorted the President Adams into port Sunday in honor of the visiting British official.

DISASTROUS FIRE AT HAT

Blaze Guts Large Building—Damage Amounts to $155,000

Exclusive to the Bulletin

MEDICINE HAT, Oct. 1.—Fanned by a strong wind a fire, which broke out in the rear of the building, which was owned by the late J. H. C. M. Amery, secretary of state for the dominions, for full information regarding the position of the British harvesters in Canada. The investigation requested information with respect to the situation of the harvesters who returned to Great Britain from Canada.

Although the firemen struggled bravely to prevent the fire from spreading, the building was destroyed, and the flames were not under control for seven hours. Wind blew a strong ally of the fire and in spite of their efforts the conflagration spread to every part of the building.

Danger to surrounding buildings was eliminated by the prompt work of the brigade, and at 10 o'clock Sunday night the fire was brought under control.

M. M. Walde, manager for the Codville firm, stated that arrangements were under way by which the firm would be fitted by competitors into his company for the time being, and that as soon as a suitable building would be available, the fresh stocks would be shipped into Medicine Hat.

Labors Ask About British Harvesters

BIRMINGHAM, England, Oct. 1.—At a private session Sunday, the executive of the Labor party adopted a resolution asking Mr. H. C. M. Amery, secretary of state for the dominions, for full information regarding the position of the British harvesters in Canada. The investigation requested information with respect to the situation of the harvesters who returned to Great Britain from Canada.

In keeping with our policy of "Satisfaction Guaranteed," we have installed the first Sorenson Automatic Hat Blocking Machine in Western Canada. By its means your hat can be blocked without shrinking either in size or in height of crown. Many hat blockers steam felts until the life has gone out of them and the crown has shrunk, even only half an inch in height, greatly altering the general appearance of the hat. This electrically operated machine ensures proper blocking and sizing without injury to the material at no increased cost to you.

HINTS ARE GIVEN FOR SANDWICHES

Spread this slice of nut bread with sweet butter or marmalade and place vegetables in sandwich form.

Watercress chopped and mixed with finely chopped crisp bacon and enough mayonnaise to hold together.

This slice of tomato and sliced lettuce and mayonnaise used instead of butter make delightful sandwiches, but do not make too long before using.

Cover 1 slice of wheat bread with thin crisp slices of cucumber. Over this spread thinly sliced chicken the canned variety mixed with mayonnaise. Now add top slice of bread. Delicious and how good!

Questions and Answers

Question: I am undecided whether or not to convert my living-room fireplace into gas. The grate is unusual and has a handsome wrought iron fire basket. As I am a home fire fan, but we prefer burning coal and wood to the fireplace, the conversion involves no end of work and is fairly ready with my hands it is.

ANSWER: Mrs. H. J. O'LEARY, Dear Mrs. H. J. O'Leary: Fireplace is a problem which one has a staff of servants to keep them always in readiness. For this reason, any number of people are using gas. Your fireplace sounds very attractive, but I doubt if it will hold itself in place. However, there is a compromise which is working out satisfactorily in many Edmonton homes.

Gas filters can arrange a small grate in the fireplace. The grate can be lighted for a few minutes until the gas lights. With this arrangement, in about 10 minutes, the grate will be burning and the fire will be established and you can be sure of a steady flame at a moment's notice.

Very sincerely yours, ANNETTE.

Question: Would you please give me some ideas about making my room attractive? When they are highly wanted to find that the children fall quite easily to sleep, without being disturbed.

ANSWER: Usually, of course, children do not go to sleep after their little tails, but sometimes there are times when they should and they usually have been ascertained. Fortunately, old folk can easily enough get to sleep when they do fall there is always the danger of broken bones that will not quickly mend.

The floor that has been waxed gives up its slippery surface quite readily if carefully waxed with oil. Hot water with a little very little amount of water will be enough to make the wax wash off. There is a danger of the floor being scratched by the wax.

If the floor is waxed or oiled, this is a good time to finish with a coat of oil. If you like a hard glossy finish use varnish stain and oil. If you prefer a more attractive finish that you may have it waxed with soap or cloth mottled slightly with floor oil which gives a good stain.

When steam and hot water heat was first used in place of the old-time hot air furnace and room stove I suppose no one questioned the appearance of radiators because they were a sign of increased comfort and broke up old-fashioned views.

Now the beauty has very decidedly worn off—and so there are many persons who consider the radiators in their rooms as avoided enemies. In many of the especially constructed apartments and houses the radiators are hidden in the wall, frequently being located beneath a deeply recessed window, and I have heard of a plan for heating houses by running steam or hot water pipes beneath stories so that the floor and walls are evenly heated.

There are radiator covers to be had thought for some to be much more attractive than the radiators themselves. They are made of metal painted to look like grained mahogany or walnut wood or with ivory painted finish and transform the radiator into a console table or a small chest of drawers.

Model Kitchens New Thing in Japan

Missionaries Tell of Difficulties Offered by Traditional Native Equipment Used by Nipponese

Under the caption, "Dinnering in a Japanese Kitchen," the Rev. Percy A. Smith, for 16 years a missionary in the district of Kyoto, Japan, tells in the Spirit of Missions how he is trying to show in a practical way that beauty and reasonable comfort have a direct relation to wholesome living.

He says that the parlors of Japanese homes are as elegant in their artistic and beautiful simplicity but that the back of the house is often another place. He says to stand for a moment at a kitchen door until the room becomes accustomed to the semi-darkness of the place, and then to enter with him, a room about 12 by 12 feet, with a platform about 9 feet square raised in one corner about one foot above the level of the floor. This part of the floor is covered with mats of straw or rush and is the place where the host and guests sit. counteract the dryness produced by the heat.

Most of us have to content ourselves with the original metal radiator and are rather glad on damp or cold days that we are blessed with them at all. Still we can do something to make them fairly attractive.

Radiators of the usual pipe sort really are expertly constructed to gather dust and the accumulation of dust is certainly undesirable when the radiators are first heated and the dust is blown by the rising of the air around the pipes. If you have tried to keep your radiators clean with an ordinary floor brush or which broom by all means get a radiator brush and use it in your radiators every week. It is a long-handled, very narrow brush which slips in between the pipes quite easily.

Stains and spots on radiators sometimes withstand washing with soap and water, but may be removed by rubbing with a little strong water and ammonia solution. And at quite small cost you may buy the paint to refresh your radiators in a tone that gives them harmonious with your surroundings that the original brain paint.

There is no table. Sometimes the housewife uses the sink for a table, sometimes she stands on the lower floor and uses the higher one for a table. One foot high, or sometimes the sink on the higher floor. One Japanese woman said that her kitchen was very much improved since they had put a window in it as it was pretty hard to see before, especially when it was too foggy to have the light open. Some of the kitchens have dirt floors.

Kitchen Floor Unusual Since improvements have been begun great difficulty has been experienced with some carpenters. Sometimes they have refused to put in a floor over the whole kitchen because they had such a thing in mind as to put in a kitchen before. Again it was the sink—the order had been put in to have the sink and the drain put in the sewer. The carpenter considered such connections entirely unnecessary. Again "The ground slopes toward the drain and the water will find its way there without any pipes or the drain is under the floor and no one will ever see it anyway." In some kitchens the worker has had to wear wooden clogs when doing her work as she was constantly treading on the water. Again she has had to do most of her work out in the rain as the rain was so dark she could not see across it.

Housewife Caught Ideas The Japanese housewife caught the idea and at the time when Dr. Smith wrote this article had not adopted it. One such kitchen is the show place of the city in which it is located and has been written up in the papers. Another woman who made for several other houses, and so the

Flapperhood Still Loves Domesticity Says Editor of Junior League Magazine

Exclusive to The Bulletin The home fires are still burning in flapper hearts in spite of their exaggerated independence and matter-of-factness about love, home and children, in the opinion of Mrs. Charles A. Lindley, editor of The Junior League Magazine.

As editor of this official organ, Mrs. Lindley feels the pulse of the younger women all over the country who will be the social leaders of their respective communities.

Girls today are astonishingly serious at heart," she said. "Their nonchalant manner and attitude gives out of their abhorrence of sentimentality rather than a lack of feeling. The key to their behavior is summed up in their own phrase, 'What is all the shooting about?' But the fact that they like a few things does not mean that they are indifferent to the home and family things that the women of yesterday stressed so much."

"It is just that the young women of today have a business efficiency and matter-of-factness about living. They are not romantic. They insist that their lives be interesting. They are constantly surprised to find that they are interested in home and family things."

"I should say that women's love of home and family life is not dead. The method of living merely has changed."

Put Flower Boxes in Library Windows An activity of the New York City Garden Club has been the placing of flower boxes in the windows of the public libraries of the city. They also have been "Every Public Library Window a Garden." The bulletins of this organization says that many of the one of the libraries are already equipped with window boxes where growing plants and flowers add to the cheerfulness of the neighborhood and give pleasure to the readers and librarians using the building.

There is no fund for this purpose and library rules do not permit collection for any purpose within the library so the work is being done through the efforts of members living near the different branches or other interested friends. There are many branches in Manhattan and the Bronx and those all promising a blossoming appearance would be a sight to those who must spend much time in the city during the summer.

As spreading and we may expect before many years to know that Japanese kitchens are as lovely and comfortable as Japanese parlors.
